"Morning News"

Jennie McBride was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where she spent her childhood, but she has lived in many different areas of the country. She has been interested in visual arts, music and writing all her life and attended classes at the Layton School of Fine Art as well as several art classes at the University of Wisconsin – Milwaukee and the University of California at Los Angeles. She has also studied under the tutelage of wonderful artists such as Judi Betts, Judy Chalmers and watercolorist, Frank Nelson.

She works in many different media, but favors watercolor and pastels. Many subjects are explored, since her main interest is capturing light. Even night time scenes are done to explore light as seen in her "Times Square" piece.

Jennie worked with the Mountain Valley Arts Council for nearly twenty years, helping to develop art and music programs that have grown into national events.

Now retired from the Arts Council, Jennie lives with her husband Jim who is a sculptor and artist. They enjoy teaching art and music and sharing their studios with anyone who wants to develop their interest in the arts.

The artist has won awards and purchase prizes at Art on the Lake and other shows, and her work is in private and public collections throughout the region.
